VOL. LXXIII., No. 16. NEW YORK, April 18, 1908. WHOLE No. 1890

Robert W. Chambers'

NEW SPRING BOOK

This is a beautiful volume after the style of "Iole" with inlay on cover by G. C. Wilmshurst in colors, and in addition to the halftone, full page illustrations by A. B. Wenzell, numerous marginal drawings by Wallace Morgan, the creator of "Fluffy Ruffles." The story is in Mr. Chambers' most humorous and fanciful vein, and portrays several distinctive characters at a New York club.

Some Ladies In Haste

The story of some maids, some men and a mischief-maker. The latter is a young clubman who has acquired the power of mesmerism. He sees in his friends many seeming faults which he rectifies by absent treatment. The five couples, unknown to each other, are in turn brought together in their new "hobbies," in a most surprising and unconventional manner. The young hypnotist finds he is unable to reverse the treatment, which furnishes material for one of the cleverest stories of the year.

D. APPLETON & COMPANY, Publishers, New York

New Macmillan Novels

"A fine story, finely told."

Frank Danby's The Heart of a Child

BEING PASSAGES FROM THE EARLY LIFE OF SALLY SNAPE, LADY KIDDERMINSTER

"It will be one of the big publishing successes of the season. . . . No one before has caught the atmosphere of theatrical life so completely as she, or put it to such vivid uses . . . for who says Frank Danby, says sparkling wit and shrewd observation. . . . And all the while there is a fine story, finely told." —The Sunday Chronicle, London.

Mr. F. Marion Crawford's The Primadonna

By the author of "Fair Margaret," "Arethusa," etc. READY NEXT WEEK

There has been nothing by Mr. Crawford for a long time so individual and delightful as this novel of a great singer's adventures. The books are quite independently interesting, but those who knew "Fair Margaret" while she was studying for the opera in Paris will be doubly delighted with "The Primadonna." Ready April 22. With frontispiece, $1.50

IN PRESS. A NEW NOVEL BY THE AUTHOR OF "CONISTON"

Mr. Winston Churchill's Mr. Crewe's Career

Mr. Churchill's new hero plays the political game of to-day; his character is a strong piece of original creation and the story in which he moves gains in quickness of movement from its being of the present. There is a good deal of curiosity as to the relation between some of its "corroborative detail" and its author's experiences.
Ready May 5. Illustrated. Cloth, $1.50 net.

A NEW NOVEL BY THE AUTHOR OF "THE CALL OF THE WILD"

Mr. Jack London's powerful The Iron Heel

"One of the half dozen American writers with the real story telling gift," has written what is described as "a book so charged with dynamic influence . . . that it is more than mere book, it is a phenomenon." Another critic says: "London's graphic style, his gift for holding his reader in the grip of the story, have never been more apparent. Its success as a work of the imagination is apparent." Cloth, 12mo, $1.50

A NEW BOOK BY THE AUTHOR OF "THE GARDEN OF A COMMUTER'S WIFE"

The Major and the Markis With other stories of Human Nature

By Barbara Campbell (Mabel Osgood Wright), Author of "The Garden of a Commuter's Wife," "People of the Whirlpool," etc.

Stories of human interest against out-door back-grounds in which the changing seasons act upon the human temperament. Illustrated. Cloth. In press.

The Cheerful Smugglers

By ELLIS PARKER BUTLER

"'I declare one collar.'"

You can't imagine a jollier story.

A young married couple get up a scheme for raising money for their baby's education by placing an import duty on everything coming into the house; cigars, candy, clothing (including that of the guests), etc.

The way everybody tries to beat this game, even the young couple themselves, and the remarkable manner in which their guests manage to get along with very few clothes, makes up one of the funniest books in years.

NOTES IN SEASON.

G. W. DILLINGHAM Co. have just brought out "Jedge Waxem's Pocket-Book of Politics," by William J. Lampton, which is about as full of old-fashioned hard horse sense as an egg is full of meat. "Uncle Joe" Cannon, the Speaker of the House, has endorsed the book—which, however, doesn't interfere with its sale. It joins with every known party in hitting at humbug and cant.

E. P. DUTTON & Co. will publish shortly "My Alpine Jubilee," by Frederic Harrison, who was the guest of the Alpine Club at their recent jubilee, and at their suggestion he consented to collect some pieces that he had written on mountaineering from his own experience, which long preceded the origin of the club. These are embodied in the present volume, and Mr. Harrison has prefixed to them some letters which he wrote to his wife and daughter during a visit to Switzerland last year. The articles are reprinted from the London Times and Westminster Review, and one from the Cornhill, on Sir Leslie Stephen as a mountaineer. The volume contains a full length portrait of Mr. Harrison, in photogravure, taken last year. They will also publish immediately "Aspects of George Meredith," by Richard H. P. Curle.

HARPER & BROTHERS publish this week in the form of a novel "The Servant in the House," by Charles Rann Kennedy, which as a play at the Savoy Theatre in New York City has created a great sensation. The author states that in this work he has "tried to set forth the only feasible law in society, that of a spiritual brotherhood among mankind." They have also just ready a new novel by Samuel M. Gardenhire, author of "Lux Crucis," etc., entitled "Purple and Homespun," the hero of which is a self-made man and newly-appointed Senator who aspires to ally himself to the daughter of a British ambassador, and almost fails, whereon hangs the tale; "Bertrand of Brittany," by Warwick Deeping, a stirring story of life in mediæval times; "Astronomy With the Naked Eye," by Garrett P. Serviss, whose plan is to enable the casual observer of the night skies to appreciate the scheme of the constellations; also, "The Standard of Usage in English," by Professor Thomas R. Lounsbury.

DODD, MEAD & Co. will publish on April 28 a new novel by George Barr McCutcheon, entitled "The Husbands of Edith." The story opens in Paris, where the hero is ingeniously induced by a friend, a young Englishman, to assume his identity for a few weeks and make a trip to Vienna. The young Englishman disappears on a mission of his own and the hero prepares for the journey. To his dismay he learns that not only must he assume his friend's name, clothes and speech, but also his wife and baby. To complicate matters his supposed wife's sister, a charming girl, joins the party. With this young girl the hero falls desperately in love, and is unable to conceal his feelings not only from the young lady, but from any one else. In this dilemma the hero with his party sets out for a trip through the Tyrol, the whole story of which is told in the author's inimitably clever and entertaining manner. On the same date they will publish "Meryl," a new story by William Tillinghast Merrill, author of "Hilma." The scenes of the story are laid in New Hampshire of the present day, and among these peaceful scenes there is enacted a stirring drama of mystery, romance and adventure. The story should be dedicated to tiresome journeys, sleepy evenings and dull days, for while one reads it time will be neither dull nor slow.

WEEKLY RECORD OF NEW PUBLICATIONS.

☞ The prices of net books published under the rules of the American Publishers' Association are preceded in this list by a double asterisk , and the word net follows the price. The prices of fiction (not net) published under the rules are preceded by a dagger †. The prices of net books not covered by the rules, whether published by members of the American Publishers' Association or not, are preceded by a single asterisk, and the word net follows the price. ☜

The abbreviations are usually self-explanatory. c. after the date indicates that the book is copyrighted; if the copyright date differs from the imprint date, the year of copyright is added. Books of foreign origin of which the edition (annotated, illustrated, etc.) is entered as copyright, are marked c. ed.; translations, c. tr.; n. p., in place of price, indicates that the publisher makes no price, either net or retail, and quotes prices to the trade only upon application.

Askew, Alice and Claude. The plains of silence. N. Y., Cassell, 1907, [1908.] 7+348 p. col. front. D. cl., †$1.50.

A young girl, fresh from an English school, finds herself suddenly a part of the queer society that makes up the life of Cape Town, South Africa. Her father, of a good English family, has for many years been an unscrupulous adventurer. After fifteen years of separation he sends for her to come to South Africa. Her uncle, with whom she has lived, has been ignorant of the depths to which his brother has fallen, and she has always retained an ideal of him. His plan is to practically sell her to an old rich Jew. His conscience leads him to commit suicide the day before his daughter's wedding. She then marries a Boer farmer and settles permanently on the lonely veldt. Gives a good picture of the Boer's primitive life, and the "get rich quick" people of the alien population of the South African mining towns. By the author of "The Shulamite."

Butler, Ellis Parker. The cheerful smugglers; il. by May Wilson Preston. N. Y., Century Co., 1908. c. 277 p. D. cl., †$1.

The Fenelby Domestic tariff was a simple but lovely scheme to raise a fund for Bobberts's education—Bobberts was the Fenelby's first, aged nine months. Everything that came into the house was taxed—for Bobberts—even the possessions of guests and those of Bridget the cook. The result was a rich harvest of absurd complications and ridiculous situations, such as we might expect from the author of "Pigs is pigs." The whole houseful in the end became smugglers in their efforts to avoid the tax.

Specially valuable for its illustrations and map. Alice Harriman tried to get photographs of the 12 adults and the 12 children who first settled Seattle in 1851. Other illustrations are of the first preacher, first school teacher, first buildings, first sawmill, and of Henry Yester, the man who built this mill and many more buildings in the town. He did not come till 1852. A long search was made for these pictures and the Alice Harriman Company deserves great credit.

A character study of a beautiful English girl, daughter of the vicar of Holigard. As a mere child she was bored by the world and its people, her own happiness, gained at any sacrifice of others, being her one thought. Michael Hallibon had known her all his life, feeling a sincere friendship for her. He resolves, however, after leaving Oxford to devote his life and wealth to the poor, and becomes a reformer and a socialist. The heroine marries a rich widower and a week after her wedding day offers herself to Michael, who repulses her. She returns to her busband, and commits in the years that follow many immoral and unconventional acts, but "the ways of rebellion," the author tells us, unexpectedly lead her "into perfect peace." The authors are British surgeons. They give an account of a system of treatment of cancer and carcinoma which has apparently cured many cases, and in others has undoubtedly given relief from pain and prolongation of life. Minute details of the treatment are given, with, in the second part, a number of cases, some extending back for nearly five years. The use of the treatment after all operations for cancer is strongly advocated as increasing the probability of obtaining a permanent cure.

Last (The) Egyptian: a romance of the Nile; il. by Francis P. Wightman. Phil., Edward Stern & Co., Inc., 1908. c. '07. 7-287 p. D. cl., $1.50.

Kara, the last of a long line of royal Egyptians, inherits at the death of his grandmother, Hatatcha, the secret of an ancient tomb, which contained, besides the mummies of Egyptian kings and their families, an ancient library, consisting of papyrus and hieroglyphic slabs, older than any ever discovered, and a treasure chamber filled with priceless gems. Years ago, while visiting London, Hatatcha was greatly wronged by a Lord Roane, so with the desire for revenge she made Kara promise, before confiding the secret to him, to show no mercy to any of Lord Roane's family. Complications arise when Lord Roane, his son, Lord Consinor, with his wife and daughter Aneth come to Egypt. Kara nearly forgets his promise when he falls in love with Aneth. Gerald Winston, a wealthy young archæologist, is his rival. Many interesting situations ensue, which lead up to a happy ending.

The present book grew out of the author's academic work in connection with Harvard University, in lecturing to teachers upon certain ethical aspects of their profession. Later the ideas were further formulated into a course of lectures before the Lowell Institute. Professor Royce speaks of his work as "simply an appeal to any reader who may be fond of ideals, and who may also be willing to review his own ideals in a somewhat new light and in a philosophical spirit." He bids the reader to free his mind from the ordinary meaning attached to the word "loyalty," and to think of it as the central spirit of the moral and reasonable life of man.

All of the stories are fantasies, pure and simple—amusing, full of suggestion, and impossible to happen. Some of the story-tellers have selected the gallant Japan as an antagonist, and others have chosen our cousin England, with a good-natured wit in both cases, and a fine emphasis on human bravery and endurance. Some of the stories are entitled: "A fight in the fog," "The bombardment of the Golden Gate," "The battle off the Hook," "How the North Atlantic Squadron met the enemy," "My borrowed torpedo boat," "Pursued by the Russian police."

In this work the known facts of nature are surveyed from the viewpoint of the individual man as a self-conscious centre of the universe. An attempt is made to define his true nature, to estimate his worth and to extend his present limitations and concepts. Man's place in nature is located from his intellectual attainments and moral character rather than from his anatomical structure.

The Publishers' Weekly.

FOUNDED BY F. LEYPOLDT.

APRIL 18, 1908.

The editor does not hold himself responsible for the views expressed in contributed articles or communications.

All matter for advertising pages should reach this office not later than Wednesday noon, to insure insertion in the same week's issue.

Publishers are requested to furnish title page proofs and advance information of books forthcoming, both for entry in the lists and for descriptive mention. An early copy of each book published should be forwarded, as it is of the utmost importance that the entries of books be made as promptly and as perfectly as possible. In many cases booksellers and librarians depend on the PUBLISHERS' WEEKLY solely for their information. The Record of New Publications of the PUBLISHERS' WEEKLY is the material of the "American Catalog," and so forms the basis of trade bibliography in the United States

"I hold every man a debtor to his profession, from the which, as men do of course seek to receive countenance and profit, so ought they of duty to endeavor themselves by way of amends to be a help and an ornament thereunto."—LORD BACON.

CHANGING THE FACE OF THE STORE.

WHILE it is desirable from time to time to make changes in the store in order to alter its general appearance and to lead to the impression that something is going on, it is a mistake to make any very radical changes in the location of the various stocks. The changes should range rather from the ornately decorative to the severely plain, or the reverse, or from the crowded and impeded to the open and accessible, and vice versa, rather than in the transpostion of what may have become a well-known arrangement of the books or other stock.

The regular customer may have been trained, so to speak, to look in a certain part of the store for what he wants, and where he has always found that in which he is interested. As a matter of fact, on one of his rounds he may have made a mental note of something that he reserved for a more close examination on another visit to the store. If therefore the stock has been moved about, or, as not infrequently happens, has been transferred to another part of the building, the book which the customer had in mind may have lost its identity, or the customer's thought of it its continuity, and so the sale for the time being may be lost. The sale may, indeed, be lost forever, unless some one is at hand who knows just exactly where the particular stock the customer is looking for has been moved to; and it is exasperating how often there is no one around who is able even in the remotest way to help a customer out when he is struggling with some half-remembered impression. If he makes the inquiry of say, any one of three clerks who may happen to be grouped together in one spot, as is often the case, gaping into vacuous space, an attitude peculiar to the time-server, all three will move off into different directions —two of them very likely without any intention of looking for what is wanted, or of returning to report to the customer, and the third either too conscientious, or, let us say, too timid, to follow the example of his colleagues, will flounder helplessly through the store and, finally, return to the customer with word that the book is no longer in stock. Usually the customer does one of two things—he leaves the store without complaining or he raises a row with the proprietor. More often he turns his back on the store, and if more efficiently and courteously served elsewhere, will never go back to it again. Thus is the master often served, and these are some of the consequences of making too radical changes in the arrangement of the stock. Of course, in very large stores even very radical changes are frequently necessary; but when they are made special care should be taken that any body who is seeking for whatever may have been transferred is directed to its new location without delay or trouble of any kind.

Ordinarily, changes in the store should be restricted to the decoration and arrangement rather than to the transferring of stock from one part of the store to another, or from one floor to another. In the months succeeding the Christmas season the store is permitted to have a disorderly appearance—as though its proprietor was preparing to clear out half his stock. Yet even this disorder should be carefully studied and confined to the portable tables in the middle of the store and not interfere with the general arrangement of the stock. Presently, this clearance-sale look of the store should make way for the airy decorations to which the valentine season lends itself. Next follow patriotic colors for Lincoln's and Washington's birthdays, green for St. Patrick's day, purple for the Lenten season and white for Easter. During the Spring and Summer months the store should be dressed in light attire—linen and gossamer—to which so many of the book-covers lend themselves, and present a cool and refreshing aspect. As Winter approaches the bookseller may indulge himself in warmer effects—yellows, reds and rich dark greens, adding holly and evergreens as Thanksgiving Day and Christmas and New Year's approach. It is really curious how often a color scheme will favorably affect a purchaser, and induce him to purchase things that would not have occurred to him had it not been for the suggestive decorations of the store.

Whatever changes the bookseller may contemplate he must never overlook the fact that his books are "the thing," and that nothing must interfere with their display or accessibility. Lastly, let the proprietor pay every attention to the activity and efficiency of his service, which should be the chief ornament of his business, and the lack of which are often his undoing. There are opportunities enough of changing the appearance of the store, and, within reason, advantage should be taken of them; but not to the extent that the regular patron might mistake the store for another and turn away or be unable to find his way, after he gets into it, to his familiar and favorite nooks and pasturage.

THE PUBLISHER'S RIGHT IN COMPILATIONS.

THE Appellate Division of the New York Supreme Court, First Department, on April 10 reversed the judgment of the New York Supreme Court rendered on May 11, 1905, in the suit brought by Basil Jones vs. The American Law Book Company to restrain the defendants from republishing an article prepared by Mr. Jones for the "Cyclopedia of Law and Procedure," unless his name be given as author and the statement that the article had been edited by another hand be eliminated. The plaintiff recovered a judgment to that effect.

The opinion reversing this judgment, as written by Judge James W. Houghton, Judges George L. Ingraham, Chester B. McLaughlin, John Proctor Clarke and Francis M. Scott concurring, is printed in full below:

The defendant is engaged in the compilation and publication of the "Cyclopedia of Law and Procedure" and the plaintiff entered into a contract with it whereby he agreed, for one year at $5.60 per page, to write and prepare original articles and treatises, or parts of articles and treatises, on subjects and topics of the law selected and assigned to him by the defendant. The contract further provided that the plaintiff should work continuously during certain hours of each business day and that whatever articles or parts of articles he might prepare should be subject to editorial changes, even to the extent of the rejection of any portion of his manuscript. The concluding part of the contract provides that the plaintiff "should reserve no right to republish any articles or parts of articles so written and prepared, it being understood by both of said parties that said part of the first part (defendant) shall become the sole owner of the copyright of said articles and parts of articles so written and prepared."

Under this contract the plaintiff prepared for defendant's publication, and by its direction, an article entitled "Army and Navy." The article so prepared by the plaintiff was largely changed in the editing and appeared in the defendant's publication without the plaintiff's name as author, the only statement as to the authorship being the statement that it was edited by Henry A. Sharpe, Associate Justice Supreme Court of Alabama. Thereupon plaintiff brought this action to restrain the defendant from publishing the article, unless his name be substituted as author and the statement that the article was edited by Henry A. Sharpe be eliminated. The plaintiff recovered a judgment to that effect.

We think the plaintiff's contract is such that he is not entitled to the relief which he has obtained. He does not claim and cannot claim any right in the published article or any right to publish it himself in any form, for he relinquished all rights of that description to defendant. He insists, however, that he has the right to have his name appear as author. The reasonable interpretation of the contract precludes him from this right. He entered into the defendant's employ for a stated period, to work stated hours each business day and to prepare and write any article or part of any article or do anything with respect to preparing an article for publication which the defendant might direct. Anything which he did prepare he consented might be edited in any manner the defendant desired. Such a contract is very different from one with an author to write a book or a play, even though it is to be produced within a given time and to be paid for at so much a page. Such a contract could very well be considered as contemplating that the author should have his name appear and thus enjoy whatever reputation the learning or brilliancy of the work might give him, although he retained no right of future publication. Of course, an author is entitled to his own productions. The manuscript is his own. He may retain it, or publish it or sell it. He may sell it in such a way that his name shall appear as author. He may also agree to work in such a manner that the right to have his name appear as author will be lost. The fact that he is an author and does literary work does not prevent his hiring out to another to produce an article in which his name shall not appear.

The plaintiff agreed to do any writing or compiling of entire or parts of articles which the defendant might direct. If he had written a portion of an article on any given subject, he would not have been entitled to have his name appear as author of that portion or as a colaborer with the principal author. The right to mutilate and change through editing of any article which the plaintiff might prepare, negatives the idea that the plaintiff's name was to appear as author of each article which he wrote, for it might have been so changed that he would not desire his name to appear as author, or the changes might have been of such a character that it would have been unfair for the defendant to so publish it.

Whatever the plaintiff may have produced, we think belonged to the defendant and that it was under no obligation to publish the article under the plaintiff's name as author. The right was not reserved in the contract and the character of the work and the manner in which the plaintiff was to perform it was such that it is not to be presumed that the parties so contemplated when they entered into the contract.

The plaintiff insists that the contract had a practical interpretation as to what was meant, because the defendants published the article, "Ambassadors and Consuls," under the plaintiff's name. The defendant had a right to do this, but it was not obliged to do so, and the evidence loses much of its force as a practical interpretation in view of the fact that the most of this article was written prior to the entering into of the contract now under consideration.

It is also urged that the plaintiff proved a custom among publishers of similar works, of giving the name of the author of the article. It does not appear that the writers for such other publications were under a contract like that of plaintiff, nor was there such proof of a custom as would indicate that the parties contracted in relation to it. In the absence of such proof, it would be improper to read custom into the present contract.

Our conclusion is that the plaintiff had no right to demand that the defendant publish his name as author of the article, "Army and Navy," and that the judgment restraining the defendant from publishing the article without his name appearing was erroneous and must be reversed.

Judgment reversed and a new trial ordered with costs to the appellant to abide the event.

THE PUBLISHER'S RIGHT TO CHANGE AUTHOR'S MSS.

In a case now on trial in one of the courts in Brooklyn, N. Y., the question whether a publisher or editor has the right to alter or to add to an article before its publication has come up for solution.

This question is the point at issue between Charles F. Chamberlayne and the American Law Book Company, the former having brought suit against the latter on account of certain changes which were made in an article contributed by the complainant to the "Cyclopedia of law and procedure." In this contributed article, which was on the subject of "Evidence," the American Lawbook Company are said to have made changes without consulting the author. When the article was actually published certain sections were accompanied by a footnote stating that they were "by Charles F. Chamberlayne, revised and edited by Charles C. Moore and William Lawrence Clark." The right to do this Mr. Chamberlayne contests, and in order to support the justice of his contention a number of publishers and editors were called upon to give their testimony as to the rights and usages in such matters commonly observed in the publication of books and magazines. The testimony thus elicited, coming from a number of our best-known publishers, is exceedingly interesting as throwing light on what is generally considered a rather delicate ethical problem.

George Haven Putnam, of the firm of G. P. Putnam's Sons, gave it as his opinion, "based upon experience and knowledge of editorial usage, that the addition, without the consent of the author, of new material to a volume or paper, submitted by an author as 'in readiness for the press,' is inadmissible, and that such action on the part of editor or of publishers would give to such author legitimate ground for grievance. That it is contrary to the custom of the publishers of books or of publishers or editors of magazines or of serial publications to make any additions, interpolations, or material changes in articles the publication rights of which have been purchased by them (leaving the copyright in the hands of the author) or to books or articles for which both publication rights and copyrights have been purchased, excepting with the consent of the authors of such articles."

In the testimony given by Henry Holt the inviolability of an author's manuscript is made even more emphatic, Mr. Holt stating that "during all his experience he never heard of any custom justifying an editor or publisher in adding to any matter issued by him under the name of another person without the consent of such person; or even in subtracting from it in essentials, the trifling abbreviations not changing the sense are admissible where it is necessary to bring the matter within defined limits."

Dr. I. K. Funk, of the Funk & Wagnalls Company, declared that he had made it a rule in his firm, and a part of his instructions to his editors, "never directly or indirectly to make an author responsible for what he did not do or say, or for the work or words of another." This rule, however, Dr. Funk does not apply to slight verbal changes in manuscript.

Similar testimony was given by George Cary Eggleston and Orlando P. Thomson, president of the Baker, Voorhis Company, both of whom, speaking from their experience in the usages of publishers, state their belief in the author's privilege to decide upon any changes that an editor may desire to make in his manuscript before publication.

Richard Watson Gilder made the following statement: "Adding, without consent, new matter to an article is inadmissible, and there is no custom in the publishing trade by which an editor of a magazine may add to articles purchased by him without the consent of the author thereof, but that, on the contrary, it is the custom not to change, add to, or alter such articles except with the consent of the author and upon the submission of proof sheets thereof to said author."

The testimony thus advanced in this case is made to apply to all material published under a signature, whether in magazine, newspaper, or book, and apparently supports the view that such material cannot be altered without the author's consent.

The American Law Book Company denies that it has made any changes in Mr. Chamberlayne's manuscript without his consent, and adduces the contract by which Mr. Chamberlayne specifically agreed that the company might reject any portion of his manuscript or make any changes or alterations in it which it deemed necessary. It also shows that although Mr. Chamberlayne agreed to furnish a complete article, he only furnished about the first half of it, which necessitated the employment of other writers to complete the treatment of the subject Evidence. Under these circumstances, the company claims the right to publish what it has bought and paid for, with an absolutely truthful statement of the authorship and editorship of the several parts. The article Evidence is a legal compilation and not literature. When this case was up once before, Mr. Justice Edward B. Thomas denied a preliminary injunction, saying: "The evidence does not show that the defendant has made any change in the first ten subdivisions not authorized by the contract or by the subsequent modification thereof, nor does it appear that in such regard the complainant's rights will be infringed in the three subdivisions whose publication is contemplated."

It seems that this case will turn upon the actual provisions of the contract, rather than upon any question of custom.

THE PUBLISHERS' ASSOCIATION OF GREAT BRITAIN AND IRELAND.

The Publishers' Association of Great Britain and Ireland held its annual meeting at Stationers' Hall on the afternoon of April 2. There were present the principals and representatives of seventy firms, Edward Bell, the president of the association, acting as chairman.

The report of the council in reviewing the work of the association during the past year said that "The Times Book Club has been, as before, the chief cause of the extra work. At the present moment no indication has been given of the policy in regard to the Book Club, which is likely to be adopted by the company which is to be formed to take over The Times, but it may be hoped that the new management will find it to their own interest to fall into line with the rest of the trade."

The question of the Supply of books to the public libraries on special terms, according to the report of the council, "has become somewhat acute. In May last a small committee was appointed to meet three delegates from the Library Association. During the discussion we expressed some sympathy with their object, but explained that any concession which we could recommend must be subject to the assent of the Associated Booksellers. At a subsequent date the Library Association approached the Booksellers, but an offer by the latter (which we had suggested)—viz., that public libraries should be allowed a fixed discount at 5 per cent. off net books and 25 per cent. off subject books, was not accepted. The position at present is that the Library Association have intimated to the Booksellers that they propose to favor the establishment of a trading association for the supply of libraries; but in reply to an enquiry from the Associated Booksellers, the council have stated that, in their opinion, such an association could only be allowed trade terms on the understanding that they observed the conditions of the net book agreement, in which case their object would not be attained."

Owing to the prevalence of an illegitimate trade in copies of books sent to the press the council thought it advisable to recommend that all such copies should be stamped on the title-page. They report that the recommendation has already been followed by nearly all the members of the association.

Owing to the fact that applications for gratuitous copies of educational and other books are frequently made on false pretenses, the secretary is now keeping a list of the names and addresses of persons who are found to be in the habit of making such applications. It is not thought advisable to circulate it, but it is open to inspection, and the secretary will be glad to be informed of any undoubted cases that may come to the knowledge of members.

The circulation of cheap American reprints of English copyright books, both on the Continent and in the Colonies, is, unfortunately, on the increase. So far as the Continent is concerned, such cases can only be dealt with by the individual action of the publishers whose books are reprinted. In the Colonies the agents of the association are on the alert, and in June last a large quantity of such reprints was seized in Johannesburg and destroyed. The importation and sale of piratical reprints of English copyright books in Egypt is one of the subjects for discussion at the forthcoming congress at Madrid.

The routine business having been disposed of the Association proceeded to elect officers for the ensuing year, which resulted in the following choice: Edward Bell, president; C. J. Longman, vice-president; William Heinemann, treasurer.

WHAT IS A NOVEL?

In the course of trial of the suit brought by T. Fisher Unwin against James Clarke & Co., both well-known English publishers, in London, on March 26, the question was raised: What is a novel? The plaintiff alleged that a circular published by the defendants in June of last year contained statements defamatory to him and a book which he was about to publish. The defendants denied that the circular was capable of bearing defamatory meaning, and asserted that it consisted of an allegation of facts which were true, and that in so far as it consisted of expression of opinion it was fair comment.

In opening the case plaintiff's attorney said that in dealing with works of fiction there was a very great difference in commercial values—and in consequence a broad distinction was drawn by publishers—between a novel in the ordinary sense and a collection of short stories. The public would buy a novel written by a popular author much more readily than they would buy a volume of short stories even by the same author. It would, therefore, be a very wrong thing for a publisher to pass off as a novel a collection of short stories. Mr. Fisher Unwin had in the past published Mr. Crockett's first novel—which was very successful—and in January, 1907, his attention was drawn to a serial story by Mr. Crockett which was appearing in Gibbon's Stamp Weekly, under the title of "Me and Myn, Limited." He entered into negotiation with Mr. Crockett, and on April 26 an agreement was entered into between them that Mr. Unwin should publish "Me and Myn, Limited" in book form at the price of 6s., Mr. Crockett to have 25 per cent. royalty on all copies sold, and there was also a payment to him of £400 on the date on which the book appeared. Mr. Crockett stipulated that the book should not appear before July 8. He had an arrangement with the defendants that another story, entitled "Vida," should be published by them in the autumn, and he naturally did not wish the two books to appear at the same time.

Defendants objected to Mr. Crockett's book appearing in July, and in reply to their letter Mr. Crockett wrote to his literary agent, Mr. Watt, as follows:

> I think you might point out to Messrs. Clarke that no other novel of mine will appear during the autumn, and also point out that "Me and Myn, Limited" is only a light collection of stories of stamp-collecting, and not a full-dress novel.

This description of the book, said counsel, was totally inaccurate. Whatever the literary merits of "Me and Myn, Limited," judged by its continuity and by the story itself, it embodied the elementary principles of a romance. It had the full complement of words, and it was sold at the usual price for a novel.

The circular containing the statements complained of was issued by defendants on June 26 to the entire book trade, and was as follows:

> We shall be publishing in the early part of September next a new novel by S. R. Crockett, entitled "Vida," price 6s. It has come under our notice that another book by S. R. Crockett, entitled "Me and Myn," has been announced as a novel—(the word "novel," said Mr. Smith, was underlined)—for publication next month. To prevent misapprehension, we think it well to state that we have been in communication with the author, and have pointed out to him that we are sure that some persons will buy the book thinking it is his ordinary autumn novel, which we have in September, and he replies through his agent to us as follows. . . "'Me and Myn' is only a collection of stories of stamp-collecting, and not a full-dress novel." We think it necessary to bring this under your notice in case you should order the book under the impression that it is his ordinary autumn novel.

Mr. Crockett wrote to plaintiff disclaiming any participation in the defendant's action, and described the novel as "a consecutive work." Mr. Unwin issued a denial of the defendants' statements, but the effect of the latter caused very serious damage to the sale of the book. Plaintiff was deluged with letters from booksellers reducing or cancelling their orders. As many as 663 copies, issued on terms of sale and return, were returned. Apart from the loss on the sale of the book, the total expenses incurred by the plaintiff as the result of the circular amounted to £230.

The court, in summing up, said that the whole of this trouble was brought about by Mr. Crockett. As a novelist Mr. Crockett belonged to a class which included poets and artists, and which was not supposed to carry on business in the ordinary businesslike methods employed by other people. Mr. Crockett, as counsel has said, wanted to "run with the hare and hunt with the hounds." First he sold his autumn novel to the defendants, and then he sold another book to the plaintiff to appear at a time when it was generally admitted that the sale of the first book would injure the sale of the second. Novels, it seemed, sprang up like mushrooms, but there was little dispute that spring and autumn were the great seasons for them. As to what constituted a novel, one witness had said that it must have a hero, love, marriage, and other things; but whatever else it must have, it appeared that the essential was that it should consist of 120,000 words. If he could only squeeze out 120,000 words he should be a novel writer.

After a quarter of an hour's deliberation the jury gave their verdict for Clarke & Co., the defendants.

Still the question seems to remain, What is a novel?

TO PREVENT PRICE-CUTTING.

THE Pittsburg Booksellers' and Stationers' Association voted last week that when a member is overstocked on goods he must notify the active members, giving a list of the goods and the price he will accept for them. If no offer is received within three days, he will be at liberty to offer the goods at any price he chooses, regardless of association price. This is looked upon as a measure that may mitigate many of the difficulties of price maintenance.

NEW YORK RETAIL STATIONERS' ASSOCIATION.

REPRESENTATIVES of about sixteen stationery firms in New York City met at the Broadway Central Hotel on the 3d inst., and formed the Retail Stationers' Association. The following temporary officers were chosen to serve until permanent officers are elected at some future meeting: Chairman, Julius Blumberg; secretary, William B. Steiner; treasurer, Lewis Landsberg; executive committee: Lewis Landberg, Morris Botwen, H. M. Toffler, John E. Meyer and M. J. Roth.

Mr. Blumberg expressed the belief that there was room in New York for an association confined strictly to the retail trade. While admitting that he had much respect for the Stationers' Association of New York, which has really accomplished some good, he thought that, since it included manufacturers, jobbers and retailers, it could not be successful in the long run in representing equally the interests of both manufacturer and retailer.

THE OUTING PUB. CO.'S PRIZE NOVEL COMPETITION POSTPONED.

THE OUTING PUBLISHING COMPANY has received so many requests from writers for an extension of the time limit for the receipt of mss. in their $1000 first novel competition, that they have decided to postpone the closing of the competition until August 1, 1908.

The Outing Company, it will be remembered, is offering a prize of $1000 for the best manuscript of a good, live story by a new writer, sent in by the time indicated. The final selection of the winning story will be made by competent readers not connected with the company.

BEST-SELLING BOOKS IN ENGLAND DURING MARCH.

According to the London Book Monthly the books that have led in the selling in England during March are the following:

The Fly on the Wheel, by Katherine Cecil Thurston.
The Sword Decides, by Marjorie Bowen.
The Heart of a Child, by Frank Danby.
The Prima Donna, by F. Marion Crawford.
Modern Egypt, by the Earl of Cromer.
New Worlds for Old, by H. G. Wells.
Letters of the Wordsworth Family from 1787 to 1855, collected and edited by Professor Knight.

POST-CARD NOTES.

Change in Post-Card Marking.—As a result of numerous complaints of postal and post-cards being defaced by the postmarking, the Postmaster-General has ordered discontinuance of the postmarking cards at the office of address. The postal card fad has reached enormous proportions, and the new ruling is expected by postal officials to be received with satisfaction by the thousands of collectors.

OBITUARY NOTES.

John Murphy, whose second-hand bookstore at 241 Washington Street, Brooklyn, N. Y., has been a landmark in that thoroughfare for the last twelve years, died suddenly in his rooms over the store on April 11, aged fifty-six. Before moving to Washington Street he had a book stand in old McCumber Square, at the junction of Fulton Street and DeKalb Avenue, for many years.

Francis W. Vaughan, for thirty-eight years librarian of the Social Law Library at the Court House in Boston, Mass., died at Capri, Italy, April 2, aged seventy-four. He was graduated from Harvard in 1853 and was admitted to the Suffolk Bar, but never practiced. He became civil assistant to Captain Andrew A. Humphreys and Lieutenant Henry L. Abbott, U. S. Engineers, in the preparation of their report on the Mississippi River and Delta. In 1870 he was appointed librarian of the Social Law Library, which had been formed in the days of Chief Justice Theophilus Parsons, and had been for years under the charge of a crier of the Supreme Judicial Court. Under Mr. Vaughan's care the library has become one of the best professional collections in the United States.

Hartwig Derenbourg, the well-known Orientalist, died in Paris, April 13. Professor Derenbourg was the son of Joseph Derenbourg, a German-French Orientalist, and was born on June 17, 1844, in Paris. He was educated there and at Göttingen and Leipsic. From 1866 to 1870 he was employed at the Bibliothèque Nationale and edited the catalogue of Arabic manuscripts. In 1875 he began teaching Arabic in the Ecole des Langues Orientales, and became a professor in 1879. In 1886 he became professor of Islamitic science at the Ecole des Hautes Etudes. He was the author of a number of works in Latin, French and Arabic, including an Arabic grammar, "The History of the Literature of the Old Testament," "The Science of Religion," "Ousama Ibu Mounkidh" and "Chrestomathie Elémentaire de l'Arabe Littêral," the last named being regarded as his principal work.

Lieutenant Charles Adiel Lewis Totten, U. S. A., inventor and author, died at his home in Milford, Conn., April 12. He was born in New London, Conn., February 3, 1851, and was graduated from the West Point Military Academy in 1873, when he was commissioned second lieutenant in the Fourth Artillery. He was advanced to first lieutenancy in 1874, and served as professor of military science and tactics in the Massachusetts Agricultural College from 1875-'8. He served in the field in the West during the Bannock War and in the Chiricahua campaign. From 1883 to 1886 he was again professor of military science and tactics in the Cathedral School of St. Paul, Garden City, N. Y., and at Yale from 1889 to 1892, when he resigned to devote his attention to Biblical investigations. He invented a military game entitled "Strategos," and published Our Race, devoted to his theories of the second advent and the identity of the Anglo-Saxon race with the ten lost tribes, etc. Among some of the books published by him are: "Important Questions in Meteorology," "Lost Israel Found in the Anglo-Saxons," "Joshua's Long Day and the Dial of Ahaz," "The King's Daughters," "Flight of David's Line," "The Coming Crusade," and "Our Inheritance in the Great Seal." In all he put out about 300 books and brochures.

NOTES ON AUTHORS.

According to the will of General Count Alexis Araktcheff, one of the agents of the Emperor Paul of Russia and later an adviser of his son Alexander I., a sum of 100,000 rubles was left to accumulate until 1925, to be awarded to the one who writes the best, that is, the fullest, most trustworthy and most eloquent history of Alexander I. Calculated at 4 per cent., the 100,000 rubles will in 1925 amount to some $2,000,000 or more. It will be curious to see how the historian will deal with the subject, and how he will be able to maintain the impartiality of the historian in estimating the role of Count Araktcheff in Alexander's reign. The contest, according to a correspondent of the Brentwood Company as quoted by the New York Tribune. is open to literary men and to writers in all parts of the world, who thus are afforded an opportunity of providing for their old age, or for their children, by winning a fortune of a couple of million dollars by a single piece of literary work.

BIBLIOGRAPHIC NOTES.

FREDERIC F. SHERMAN, 42 W. Thirty-ninth Street, New York, has published a neat little pamphlet entitled "The Literary Miscellany," which contains a ballad "To Carolyn Wells," by Julian Durand, and a clever sketch by Robert Gilbert Welsh, entitled "Libraries—Ready-made and To Order." Incidentally the pamphlet is also a catalogue of the books published and for sale by Mr. Sherman. (20 p. 16°.)

LITERARY AND TRADE NOTES.

GEORGE W. JACOBS & Co. have just brought out in their American Crisis series a biography of Alexander H. Stephens, vice-president of the Confederate States, by Louis Pendleton, a native of Georgia, a writer for the Macon Telegraph.

THOMAS WHITTAKER, Inc., have published for the Lenten season a volume entitled "Seven Steps to the Cross, Meditations for Good Friday," by the Rev. Ernest Bradley; also, "Good Friday, a Service for the Three Hours," by the Rev. Charles Pardee.

TENNANT & WARD, 122 East Twenty-fifth Street, New York City, will publish early in May "The Annual of Photography, 1908," which will incorporate a well-known reference book, "Figures, Facts and Formulæ of Photography," heretofore published separately.

THE manufacturing managers in the various publishing houses are reminded that they will find in the "Directory of Publishing Adjuncts" printed in each issue of THE PUBLISHERS' WEEKLY a comprehensive and useful reference list of representative firms actively engaged in the various branches of book production.

THE CONJURORS' MAGAZINE PUBLISHING Co., 278 W. 113th Street, New York City, have just brought out a new issue of "The Unmasking of Robert Houdin," by Harry Houdini [Weiss.] The book is literally crammed with pictures, portraits and facsimiles of play-bills, etc., and is very interesting reading.

THE DODGE PUBLISHING COMPANY will bring out in May, "A Vocabulary for Young Fathers," by O. N. E., which promises to appeal strongly to the proud father, and should aid him in understanding the otherwise meaningless sounds uttered by his offspring. The book will have a number of original illustrations made by Esther P. Hill.

CHARLES G. NEUMANN, of the late firm of Neumann Brothers, bookbinders, desires to inform his former friends and patrons that he has made connections with the J. F. Tapley Co., 531 West Thirty-seventh Street, New York, where he will have facilities for turning out bookbinding according to the standard which the Neumann Brothers always endeavored to maintain.

FREDERIC F. SHERMAN, 42 W. Thirty-ninth Street, New York City, announces "King Solomon and the Fair Shulamite, a Poetic Idyl Arranged in Sequence," by Julia Ellisworth Ford, a new arrangement of "The Song of Songs," with illustrations, reproduced in photogravure, by Simeon Solomon; also, a volume of meditations on "Life" and the "Art of Living," entitled "A Day Dreamer's Harvest," by Henry Byron, a book intended to "help make life worth living and to assist in living life well."

THE BOBBS-MERRILL COMPANY will publish at once a new edition of "The History of the Philippines," by Dr. David P. Barrows, Director of Public Instruction in the islands. This book, originally prepared at the suggestion of the educational authorities for pupils in the public high schools of the Philippines, has been widely recognized as the best introduction to the study of the history of Malaysia. The second edition is rendered noteworthy by a new preface, in which the author sums up his conclusions regarding the American occupation and indicates what he regards as the best course for the future.

WITH a view to further extend and encourage the sale of American publications in Great Britain, Edmund H. Peer, for some years associated with the Review of Reviews, Macmillan & Company, of London, and at present acting manager to Parker & Co., the well-known publishers of The Digit of the Moon series, is opening up a book agency in the Covent Garden publishing quarter of London, and will be glad to hear at his address, No. 31 Bedford Street, Strand, London, from publishers in the United States with a view to arrange an agency for the sale and distribution of their publications in Great Britain.

CHARLES SCRIBNER'S SONS have just published "Mind in the Making," by Edgar J. Swift, Professor of Pedagogy in Washington University, St. Louis, Mo., a book describing various phases of a child's growth, both physically and mentally, and showing the results of the best modern investigation in psychology, sociology and pedagogy. They will publish shortly a story which first appeared in the Christmas number of Scribner's Magazine, entitled "The Master of the Inn," by Robert Herrick. A former practicing physician retreats into the country and establishes an "Inn" for those worn out with work and worry, in whom he creates new life, and then sends them back to their work refreshed, strengthened and happy, and ready to take up the battle of life again.

THE CUPPLES & LEON COMPANY will publish early in May another volume in their popular Motor Boys Series, entitled "The Motor Boys on the Atlantic." The previous volume, "The Motor Boys Afloat," is now in the second edition. They will publish at the same time in their series of new copyright fiction "My Lost Self," by Arthur W. Marchmont, a story of love and adventure by the author of "A Dash for the Throne." On May 15 they will bring out in this series a new book by William Le Quex, entitled "The Pauper of Park Lane," an extraordinary story of love and diplomacy in which there are stirring scenes in London and Paris and away in the little-known Balkans. On May 25 there will appear a brilliant satire, bubbling with fun, by Edgar Jepson, entitled "The Four Philanthropists."

E. P. DUTTON & CO. have just brought out "An Apostle of the North," being the memoirs of William Carpenter Bompas, D.D., First Bishop of Athabasca, 1874-1884, First Bishop of MacKenzie River, 1884-1891, and First Bishop of Yukon, 1891-1906, by H. A. Cody, Rector of Christ Church, Whitehorse, Y. T., Canada, and having an introduction by the Archbishop of Rupert's Land. This book is worthy of more than passing notice, being the record of a life of the most absolute devotion to mission work among the Indians of the far Northwest. Bishop Bompas, when a young man, volunteered for this service under the Church Missionary Society, and, shutting himself in with the Indians, the Tenni, the Turkudh and the Eskimos, spent his life for their welfare, and died in 1906, aged seventy-two. The book is also descriptive of the country and the people, and is well illustrated.

J. B. LIPPINCOTT COMPANY publish this week two new books, which, while addressed particularly to the medical profession, should appeal to any one interested in the subjects treated. The first is "Glimpses of Medical Europe," by R. L. Thompson, M.D., and is an account of a summer's visit to the prominent medical schools of Europe. The "glimpses" that one gets are personal and cleverly set forth, and a charming story is presented to the reader. The illustrations are worthy of comment—especially the original sketches of Tom Jones, who has admirably caught the lighter vein of the writer. The second book is "Practical Life Insurance Examinations," by Murray E. Ramsey, M.D., and intended as a handbook for medical life insurance examiners. The appearance of Thomas McKean's new novel, "The Master Influence," which will be published by the Lippincotts on April 22, is of especial timeliness, as the author has acknowledged that to a great extent the character of the hero was drawn from Governor Hughes, of New York.

A. C. MCCLURG & COMPANY are about to issue the seventh edition of Colonel Clark E. Carr's "The Illini," whose new book, "My Day and Generation" has just been published. Added to the illustrations will be an interesting portrait, from a rare print, of Henri Bertrand, Grand Marshal of France, most loyal of Napoleon's followers, who shared, indeed, not only the Elba banishment with his fallen emperor, but those six bitter years at St. Helena. In the dual romance running through his book, Colonel Carr recounts the eventful history of one of Marshal Bertrand's descendants, "Colonel Percival, who, born into servitude, for years a fugitive—and, most tragic of all, fugitive from the father he believed to be of an alien race—struggling to make a fortune in South America, winning his way to the New York Bar, winning his epaulettes in the War between the States, always vindicating by his persistence and his brilliant success the ancestry that included Henri Bertrand, stands revealed, at the climax of the romance, no less worthy of the esteem of Grant, his general, than of the pride of the old Sieur de Besanson and his father, General Silverton. Indeed, it is this direct human interest that imbues this fundamentally historic work with the charm of fiction.

G. P. PUTNAM'S SONS will publish next month a new book by Horatio W. Dresser, author of "The Power of Silence," and other works on the "inner life," entitled "The Philosophy of the Spirit." In his new work Dr. Dresser has undertaken a systematic study of the higher nature of man in relation to the divine presence. The Spirit is defined as God in action, in immediate reference to experiences with which every man is familiar; the divine presence is said to be immanent in all departments of human life. In contrast with the agnosticism of the day, emphasis is placed upon what man knows instead of upon that of which he is doubtful. The result is an illuminating study of the life of feeling, the emotions, intuitions, guidance, faith and reason. They expect to bring out in June the first volume of a full and scholarly biography of Mirabeau, by Frederick Morrow Fling, which is to be in three volumes. The first volume is devoted to the youth of Mirabeau, and closes with the year 1774, when he legally came of age; the second will follow Mirabeau's fortunes during his confinement in French prisons, and during his activity as a publicist and in the time of his residence in Holland, England and Germany, ending in 1788, with the preparations for elections to the States-General; the third will deal with Mirabeau and the National Assembly.

John Lane Company publish this week "The Master Knot," by Alice Birkhead, a story of two women who differ widely in character and fortune, but whose fates are intertwined, each of whom struggles to untie the knot of destiny—to find that human hands are powerless to unloose it, and that it binds together the fluttering strands of the life, before held free, till security brings happiness even as youth passes and desires become less strong; "The Gates that Shall Not Prevail," by Herbert M. Farrington, a story that deals with the progress of a movement which became known as "The Great Crusade," and which, inaugurated and carried on by one "Brother Paul," a cleric of an unconventional type, had for its object the bringing of Christianity "from the region of the impracticable theology into the market places of the world;" "The Isle of Maids," by M. T. Hainsselin, a story dealing with the adventures of two young men fresh from Oxford, who decide, by way of a holiday, to find an uninhabited island and live for a time away from civilization, and select one of the Aegean group in the Mediterranean, where many brisk adventures and stirring scenes follow, interspersed with love-making; also, "The King's General in the West," being the life of Sir Richard Granville, baronet, (1600-1659,) by Roger Granville, M.A., Sub-Dean of Exeter Cathedral, which, compiled from various sources, also tells the story of the English civil war.

Sherman, French & Co., Boston, announce the following volumes, editions of their own, taken over from other publishing houses: "The Touch of Nature," by Augustus M. Lord, a delightful book, mostly for young people, containing thirteen "little tales of great peoples," one story for each great nation, retold in his own language by the author; "The Influence of Emerson," by Edwin D. Mead, a study of Emerson's philosophy largely in its relation to modern scientific and ethical problems; "The Spark in the Clod," by J. T. Sunderland, a review of the effect of modern knowledge of evolutionary processes upon our intellectual, moral and religious conceptions; "Religious Freedom in American Education," by Joseph H. Crooker, a painstaking research into the status of religious education in its present connection with and its proper relation to our various institutions of learning, from the public school to the great university; "The Ethics of Evolution," by James T. Bixby, a doctor of philosophy of the University of Leipsic, which is so enlightening a book on its subject that it has been translated into Japanese because of its merits as an exposition of modern ethics; "The Smoke and the Flame," by Charles F. Dole, the well-known writer and preacher on ethics and civics, a study in the development of religion from the early ages of the Christian era down to the present time, together with an outline of what the character of the coming church should be, and the work which it ought to do; also, "Apples of Gold," compiled by Clara Bancroft Beatley, in which may be found apples of golden verse gathered from some of the choicest gardens of poetry.

Houghton, Mifflin & Co. will bring out on April 25 Miss Alice Brown's remarkable story, "Rose MacLeod," which has attracted so much attention during its run as a serial in the Atlantic Monthly. They will publish on the same date "The Life of Alice Freeman Palmer," by George Herbert Palmer, Professor of Moral Philosophy in Harvard University, a remarkable record of a typical American woman whose life was of historical importance in the development of education in America, as president of Wellesley College, member of the Massachusetts State Board of Education and dean of the Woman's Department, University of Chicago; "Which College for the Boy?" by John Corbin, author of "An American at Oxford," etc., who describes a group of typical American colleges and universities with a view to their ideals and courses; "Lands of Summer," by T. R. Sullivan, author of "Day and Night Stories," etc., which deals with his travels through the countries bordering on the Mediterranean; "The New American Type, and Other Essays," by Henry D. Sedgwick, twelve essays on American politics, literature and manners; "The Soul of Spain," by Havelock Ellis, author of "A Study of British Genius," etc., the famous English psychologist, who writes vividly and picturesquely of Spanish life, art, literature, etc., and with penetration of the momentous changes which are now occurring in the life of the Spanish people; "Italica—Studies in Italian Life and Letters," by William Roscoe Thayer, thirteen readable papers on contemporary Italian literature and politics by the author of "The Dawn of Italian Independence," for which King Victor Emmanuel conferred upon him the Order of the Crown of Italy; "A Short History of Venice," also by Mr. Thayer, which was formerly published by the Macmillan Company; "The Intoxicated Ghost, and Other Stories," by Professor Arlo Bates, a collection of short stories each of which has some striking psychological idea or haunting situation at the root of its plot; also, a new enlarged edition of Mrs. Sutherland Orr's "Life and Letters of Robert Browning."

A NOVEL OF TODAY

THE MASTER INFLUENCE

By THOMAS McKEAN

Illustrated in color by Will Grefé

12mo, Decorated cloth, $1.50

THE MASTER INFLUENCE

deals with social conditions of the present day. Its characters are modern people with modern ideas, and the scenes are laid mostly in New York City, with fascinating touches of Paris and Sicily.

The plot centres about the heroine, a character of absorbing interest, who believes herself incapable of love, altho it later proves the master influence of her life.

The hero will at once be recognized as a study of the Governor of one of our leading states—"A politician who is an earnest reformer to whom honesty and integrity are everything."

In the Dead of Night

By JOHN T. McINTYRE

A tale that possesses sufficient movement and thrilling incident to fit out ten ordinary stories of mystery and adventure.

The hero is, as it were, kidnapped in the first chapter, placed in another man's shoes, and forced to act in the dark. He is set in the midst of piled-up mysteries, besieged on every hand, and forced by pride, later by love, to unravel the tangled web, the threads of which fate has placed in his hands.

The entire action of the story takes place in the silent watches when the heart of a great city beats faintly.
